

Saved by the Corn

One morning, an important man was swimming in a river. He held on to the corner of a plank.

A woman not far away, on the river's shore, was cooking corn.

Suddenly, the important man's hand slipped off the corner of the plank. He began to sink into the water.

"Help!" he yelled. "It's important! I cannot swim any more! I will sink. Save me!"

"I am an important man! If you save me this morning, I will give you a prize!"

He gave her a prize of seven silk dresses. She looked at them. Six were torn. The last one was not torn.

The woman quickly saved him.

She said, "I am so happy that one dress is not torn!"

The important man looked quite hungry, so she cooked him more corn.

After some time, their baby was born.
(A stork didn't bring him.)

They lived happily ever after.
And that is the end of this short story.

Snakes And Ladders

Instructions: Each player tosses the dice, and then moves his piece the number of spaces on the dice to the space indicated.

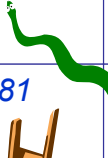

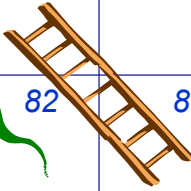

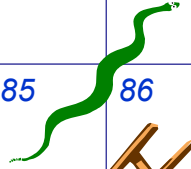

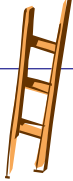

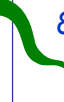

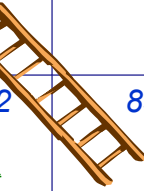

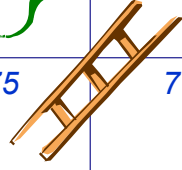

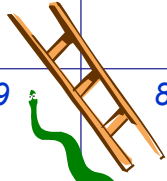

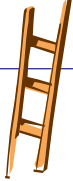

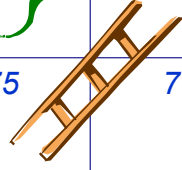

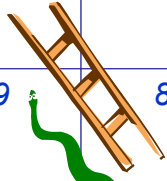

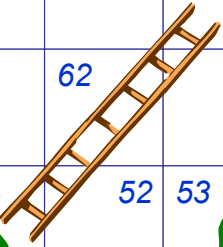

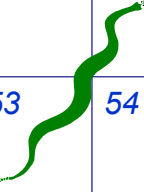

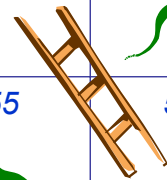

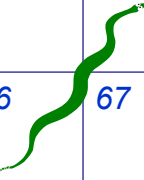

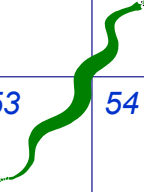

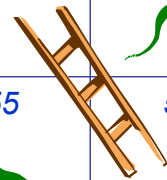

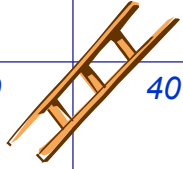

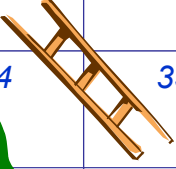

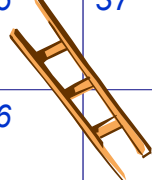

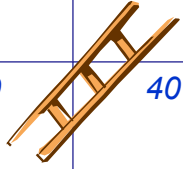

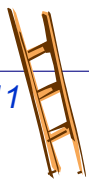

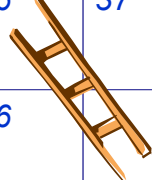

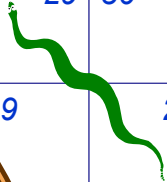

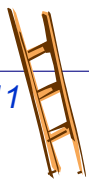

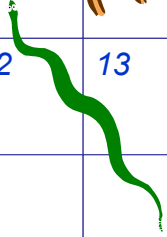

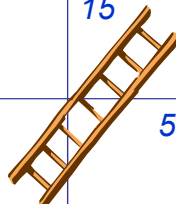

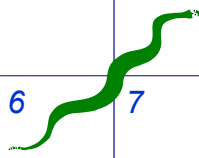

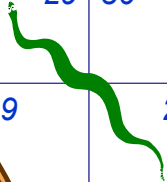

When a player lands on the space at the bottom of a ladder, he is asked to read and translate the next word from the "Ladders" list. If the answer is right, then the player climbs the ladder to the top.

When one lands on a snake's mouth, he is asked to read the next word from the "Snakes" list and translate it. If the answer is not right, he slides down the snake to the tail.

The game goes on until the first player reaches 100.
